

Contribution ID: 128

Type: Presentation

Multiwavelength Study of Supersoft X-ray Sources in Magellanic Clouds

Supersoft X-ray sources constitute a fascinating class of X-ray systems. Some of these sources consist of a compact object accreting material from a binary companion. The analysis of X-ray and optical spectra discloses valuable information on the exact nature and temporal variation of the extremely powerful physical processes involved.

Primary author: Mrs ODENDAAL, Alida (University of the Free State)

Co-author: Prof. MEINTJES, Pieter (University of the Free State)

Presenter: Mrs ODENDAAL, Alida (University of the Free State)

Track Classification: Track D1 - Astrophysics